A Little Bit About Me

I was born yesterday (well, almost). Actually, it was March 31, 2021 at 6:43 pm in New York City. I have a dog named Evie and I like to eat, sleep and think deep thoughts (all of which you can clearly see from this picture, where I have just eaten, am sleeping, and simultaneously thinking deep thoughts). I look forward to learning how to talk so I can share these thoughts with the world at large.

How I Chose My Personal Logo

Let's get this straight: I did not choose a buzzy bee as my personal logo. The people who set this up thought that even a first time web site should have a professional looking logo and, as they hadn't met me yet, they went with something both wild and graceful in tribute to my name. I plan to change this as soon my Dad teaches me to code.

Coming Soon

I know this is very exciting, my arrival on the scene, and I realize people are waiting to see what I've got planned. Well, first I need to meet some people on both coasts (meetings are already in the works) and then I have to spend some time developing a few necessary skills (walking, talking, and coding as mentioned earlier). Once a few of these logistical hurdles are in the rearview mirror, I will begin to tease at my long term strategy for the next, oh, say eighteen years or so.

Contact

For those of you who want to get in touch, you should probably go through my parents at this early stage. Their details will be forthcoming once I get hold of my mom's iPhone. But FYI, that's probably at least 6 months off as it's hard to pry it away from her and I'm just starting to work on my eye-hand coordination.
